Re-inventing the Student Union

Over 50 years as a student hub

From the old log cabin through today, a look at our union's history

By MAUREEN BARRY
The BG News

No matter the design -- past, present or future -- the Student Union has always represented the same concept.

According to Dave Crooks, union director, the union provides a gathering place for the University community.

The structure and its uses have changed throughout the years.

The first "union" was a log cabin called the Falcon's Nest, for which the current eating area on the first floor is named, Crooks said.

The traditional gathering place provided by the original Falcon's Nest carried over to the new union.

The new union was a true gathering place for students, according to Crooks.

"Things were different in the sense that almost everything that was a major public performance happened in the ballroom," Crooks said. "The building was a major entertainment center."

Entertainment acts such as Peter, Paul and Mary and Louis Armstrong performed in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom, he said.

The University Board of Trustees will vote on a plan Thursday that would lead to a newly renovated and expanded Student Union on campus. At a cost of nearly $30 million, this project would be the single largest monetary undertaking in the 87-year history of this institution.

All this week, The News takes a close look at the components of the plan. Today, the newspaper looks at the history of the current Student Union.

The Phi Mu house -- which may be moved as a result of the plan -- will be featured Tuesday. A story on the history of Prout Hall -- which may be demolished in favor of more room for the Union -- runs Wednesday.

creased, concerts and performances were moved to Anderson Arena, according to Crooks.

When the union opened, the University Bookstore was located where the Bowl-N-Greenery and The Little Shop are now, according to Crooks.

BG stuns No. 1 MSU

□ Freshman goalie Shawn Timm twirled a shutout Sunday for Bowling Green as the Falcons shocked the nation's top-ranked hockey team.

By WILLIAM SANDERSON
The BG News

EAST LANSING, Mich. -- A season's worth of frustration faded away a little bit, as Bowling Green beat top-ranked Michigan State 1-0 on Sunday.

The game's No. 1 star, BG goalie Shawn Timm, truly earned it as he stopped 42 shots to earn his first collegiate shutout. BG's Dennis Williams scored the game-winning goal at 7:11 of the third period and the Falcons were able to hang on.

"Adam Lamarre's one-timer hit the post," Williams said. "I just followed it up and it went in."

The Falcon victory snaps a streak of nine consecutive games without a victory this season. The fact that it came against the nation's top team made it all the more sweet.

MSU had won the first game of the weekend series 4-2 on Saturday.

"The fact that we won the game is a huge relief for the team and the coaching staff," BG coach Buddy Powers said.

Habitat home owners thankful for new opportunities

The Habitat for Humanity houses stand in Bloomdale, Ohio. The Border's family moved into their house early September.

□ Asserting that they are 'not a hand out,' the housing program allows families to gain a sense of pride.

By ROCHELLE CONVERSE
The BG News

When Tina Borders moved into her new Habitat for Humanity home, she was glad to leave behind the overcrowded trailer she shared with her husband, Robb, and daughter, Chelse.

"I think this is great because we would have never been able to afford a house alone," she said.

The Borders used to live in Bowling Green and were turned down for housing assistance in the city. They were also denied a loan at the bank.

As a young couple starting out, they made financial mistakes, which tarnished their credit, she said. The problems included medical bills that accumulated when the family didn't have insurance.

"We had a lot of things happen in a short period of time," she said. "We made really dumb mistakes and now we're paying for it."

Habitat for Humanity comes to BG campus

By WENDY SUTO
The BG News

A campus chapter of Habitat for Humanity installed last spring is up and running and attempting to help out those less fortunate.

Funded by a University grant, the group plans to help build affordable housing for families who otherwise would not have the opportunity to own a home.

Will Roudebush, a construction management professor, is the advisor for the campus chapter of Habitat. He got involved when Maxine Miller, the director of the Wood County chapter, contacted him.

"She approached me in 1995, and she and I and one of the other students got together to learn how to organize Habitat for Humanity on campus," he said. "Someone from the international Habitat for Hu-

A new Student Union on the horizon

News columnists pass judgment on the Student Union renovation plans

Prout Hall loss is everyone's gain

When the time comes to destroy some buildings for the new union's construction, I will be more than willing to operate the wrecking ball that leads the demolition.

As an outspoken columnist in favor of the union plan, I shudder not only at the plan's critics, but at their reasons as well. Obviously, there are those who are angry not only because they are being forced to move, but because their former residence will receive a fate worse than Al Capone's vault.

Contrary to complaints, I've always realized that a new union could be built without annihilating Prout Hall. However, the difference in these plans' budgets rings to the tune of $9 million, which is slightly more than the cost of tuition for one semester.

Perhaps the people clamoring to save Prout fail to realize how financially dramatic the cheaper plan is, let alone the pricy Prout plan. The proposed plan will run the University roughly $30 million, while the "Save Prout" project will cost $9 million more. The new union will cost slightly less than the construction of Olscamp Hall and East Hall and the renovation of Eppler Center combined.

The University has already taken two decades too long to get the funding for a new union, and finding ways to scrap together the needed capital to save Prout will only further this school's demise. Also, the defiant Prout community fails to realize their place in the grand scheme of things.

We've all seen and been in Prout Hall. Although I'm sure that unique community is great, it is definitely not the building that makes it special, because if cramped and dilapidated residence halls with mediocre food service were the ingredients of prosperous learning communities, the University would have shot to Ivy League status during the Paul Olscamp administration.

As for the others who claim the University failed to consult the Prout residents before submitting the proposal to the Board of Trustees, they may be right. However, this union idea just didn't arise this semester. The earnest fight to save Prout Hall should have started nearly two years ago, when plans for the new union started to take shape. Ultimately, the Prout community cannot ignore their share of blame for their home's demise.

Is the new union perhaps a tad too elaborate and costly? Maybe. Does the University desperately need a drawing card that can convince premiere students to go to college out in the middle of nowhere? Definitely.

The new union will not eliminate all this University's problems. However, it will help solve many of them. Although it will mark the end of an era, the razing of Prout may be the most exciting event since the opening of Al Capone's vault. Now, if we can only get Geraldo Rivera to come host.

Tom Denk can be reached at tomchenk@bgnet.bgsu.edu or at 210 West Hall.

New Student Union: Students (money) first

I must admit I was somewhat impressed by the mighty sound and fury that the BG campus community put up when they heard that the grand, new union would involve leveling Prout Hall.

I've been more satisfied, though, to see that my dismal appraisal of campus apathy has taken hold again.

So maybe I'm a little jaded on this issue, but for me, I see way more to it than two simple entities: a new union and a dead residence hall.

Universities are money-making institutions, period. If they were truly to be meccas of learning, we wouldn't be charged so much money. Now don't get me wrong. I came to college to learn, yes, but at the same time I recognize what's really going on.

How does this relate to the loss of Prout Hall, though? Some people say that the University doesn't care about the residents of Prout Hall and I agree. Other people will point to the survey from last year where 75 percent surveyed said they wanted the union in the same spot and I agree with that, too, that the union should stay where it is.

The only problem is that 75 percent weren't notified that for it to happen, Prout would have to go. Mere oversight? Doubtful. So why the deception? Well, from what I know of the plans for the new union, it could likely end up a beautiful, four-story building with offices for only student groups and a giant, open atrium with a visitor's center and food court. Basically the damned thing could look like a mall.

Brian Taylor

Here's where the money issue comes in. Which will bring in more students and also keep those who are already here: an old-looking union which can't compare to most other Ohio universities and Prout Hall still around or a brand new union that is state-of-the-art, better than anything else in Ohio and no Prout Hall.

Please, people, Prout Hall is going, going, gone. I like the place and I don't think it can be replicated anywhere else on campus. The whole physical construction of it was done on purpose in order to promote a sense of community and McDonald or any other quack can't re-create that. I think it sucks that money is winning over community.

Does Students First mean that getting students here (and their money) comes first or that their "needs" (do we really need a new union?) come first? I may be wrong, of course. The board could vote down the plan and waste thousands of dollars on drawn-up plans. Prout Hall could stay where it is and we could be forced to live with the union we currently have (which would be fine with me).

But even considering that I have been wrong before (gasp), I doubt that will be the case this time. Buh bye, Prout, it was nice knowing ya.

A business move like any other

The business of Bowling Green State University is business. That is quite obvious through the events that have unfolded over the past few months. The entire union incident is no different.

I am glad that some of the columnists were asked to write about this topic. But we should all realize that the extent to which any of us agree or disagree with the University's plans for this union project are quite irrelevant to those "above" us.

I think it is wrong to tear down Prout Hall. I think a new union is an OK idea. Any person with the same viewpoint or a differing one could choose any number of statistics to show that their opinion is "right." So I will not even bother with numbers.

The point is that the University's students are viewed primarily as consumers and while we may be told that things are going to change and improve for us, for example, by creating a new Student Union for us to gather and have fun at, the fact remains that we will be providing the University with a further source of income.

Remember, everyone, what people in charge of this place will listen to most is where we put our money. If enrollment is low, they must find ways to recruit. Why? So that this institution of higher learning will be filled with more people who can profit from an education and benefit the University with their intellect and ideas? I think not. The answer lies in securing for this institution more revenue even if that means building a new union at the expense of tearing down community.

How do you feel about the new Student Union renovation plans? Send your opinions to 210 West Hall or by e-mail to bgnews@bgnet.bgsu.edu

Can a union unite a university?

The rationale behind the building of a new union is so obvious and widely accepted it almost need not be scrutinized. But what the hell.

We've known for years that a new union, by replacing an inadequate, eyesore of a facility with a state-of-the-art crowd pleaser will give BGSU a much needed boost in enrollment and make a student's stay here more pleasant.

This fall, when the price tag was secured at $30 million, the real debate began. Is this the best plan for students trying to get the best education at BGSU? Remember, education is the University's service.

However, prospective students can't see a quality education at a preview day or in catalogs. But they can see a sparkling new union, complete with fairy tale pictures of students making things happen, with a look on their faces that says they owe it all to a conducive facility.

Soon the day comes when BG alumni start saying things like "I wish I would have learned more in college."

This regret can only be accentuated if the University places less and less emphasis on instruction itself and diverts students with technology and facilities like the Union.

But we shouldn't underestimate the power of a facility, especially if we are going to get one whether all of us like it or not. A "student-centered" union, which all student groups could call home, might be the key to unlocking the power of student groups on this campus.

There are so many wonderful groups here on campus that just fall short of impacting the University in the way they want. Can you think of one organization on this campus that doesn't have an iffy reputation? From USC to Greeks to The News, we love to talk bad about each other. In doing so we create an environment hostile to forming alliances to do things, as well as turn off potential volunteers.

By interacting in a common space, we would accept that each organization is just a few human beings trying to make things work on spare time, small budgets and little support aside from lip service. Groups become tangible as they become visible, and therefore are more attractive to those looking for something to devote their creative energies to. And if student involvement isn't the best way to utilize the resources here, nothing is. An involved campus can add value to everybody's education.

However, this is not necessarily the focus of the new Student Union. We are being seduced with money-making food courts and technological capacities, not necessarily on the space itself.

The space is important because it facilitates interaction between groups and individual students, not because it makes going to school here "fun" or because we can get our money's worth from a private food supply.

A union's potential could be maximized by showcasing campus events like art, music, campus media, lectures and debates. Having a "hub" of activity and information will have an inevitable effect on the success of things that happen on this campus.

And the emphasis has to be on the local. For example, student art and design should grace the walls. Local food merchants should rule the food court. Student groups should line the foyer with propaganda or philanthropy. University radio stations should be on the sound system. And, of course, there must be an un-ignorable events board that supplements the chaotic kiosks.

The union plan must also emphasize making this space available every day for any purpose. The bars that prevent students from taking initiatives must be removed. Hopefully, these things can be the aim of a "students-only" union.

The administration would be smart to reorganize its plans in a more education-oriented light. The Student Union's plan, with its hefty price tag, is only worth as much as it contributes to the value of the BG experience.

Joseph's Bar and Grille to be sold

CLEVELAND — The bar near where a man was killed at his bachelor party will be sold.

Joseph's Bar and Grille has been the object of complaints about violence, zoning violations, sales of liquor after hours and loud crowds.

Frank Villella, 26, of Aurora, was stabbed across the street from the bar after it closed Nov. 30. His party and the man accused of killing him, Nicholas Grubach, 26, of Euclid, were in the bar earlier that evening.

The bar's owners have agreed to sell the bar next month.

Co-owner Anthony DiSanto said the bar has no more serious or frequent problems than other bars.

He said he agreed to sell it so that he and his brothers, Dennis and Fred, can focus on their other business, a fabric and uniform company.

The brothers were to respond to charges of liquor violations last week in Columbus, but authorities agreed to cancel the hearings when the brothers said they would sell the bar.

"We found the sale of the bar to be an agreeable solution," said Eric Hardgrove, a spokesman for the attorney general's office, which represented the Liquor Control Department in the matter.

Tabloid reveals how Di and Dodi fell in love

LONDON — Princess Diana fell in love with Dodi Fayed after a food fight on his father's yacht, a British tabloid reported Sunday.

It was Bastille Day, July 14, and the yacht Jonikal was in the harbor at Cannes, France, Debbie Gribble, chief stewardess on the yacht, was quoted as saying in The News of the World.

"Diana was wearing a lovely summery dress," she said. "Dodi split some fruit and Diana playfully scooped it up and threw it at him."

"He tossed it back and within seconds a full-scale food fight was in progress. Diana gave him a ripe mango full in the face and one on the back. They were chasing each other and laughing and giggling like a couple of kids."

"Then they wrestled a bit and stopped ... just staring at each other. From that moment on something changed in the way they treated each other."

"Something had passed between them. Suddenly they seemed to fit as a couple."

The pair were often seen together in public in the following weeks. On Aug. 31, the couple died in a Paris car crash.

Correction

An error occurred in the residence hall fire story that appeared Friday in The News. The reward will be given to anyone with information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the fires. The $5,000 reward is coming from a state-wide fund established to assist law enforcement officials.

ders family, Habitat can.

Habitat for Humanity International is a nonprofit, ecumenical Christian housing ministry dedicated to eliminating substandard housing and homelessness worldwide.

Since it began 20 years ago, Habitat has built more than 50,000 homes worldwide.

Habitat is not a government program. The only government funds Habitat accepts are for land acquisition and infrastructure, such as for streets, sewers and utilities.

The money is accepted as long as no strings are attached that would violate Habitat's philosophy or limit its ability to proclaim its Christian witness.

Borders is excited about the philosophy behind Habitat because she believes people should get a second chance.

"I like the idea that it's a Christian-funded organization, so it's not really the government," she said. "It makes me feel good because it shows Christian values at work."

In order to be eligible for a Habitat home, a family must apply and fall within income guidelines. They can be too poor or too rich to qualify.

A family's income is considered too low if they are not able to afford monthly payments on the Habitat home.

Also, if a family has a large enough income to receive a conventional loan, their income is considered too high to qualify.

After being accepted, homeowners enter into a partnership with Habitat. They make a small down payment, and make interest-free payments on the home to Habitat.

The Borders family was accepted into the program when Habitat boardmembers determined the family could afford the payments.

"We figure this is $25 to $50 more a month for a house payment, taxes and insurance than for our lot rent," Borders said.

Although the Borders family owned their trailer, it was too small for the family, especially with a newborn.

Since they were unable to be approved for a loan, they didn't have any other option but to live in the trailer.

"This is a miracle," she said. "It was by God that we found this."

The Borders are owners of the third Habitat home in Bloomdale, which is approximately 20 miles southeast of Bowling Green. The first house was finished in 1993 and the second in 1995.

Owner of the second home, James Lee Wenz said Habitat reaches out to people in need.

"I think it's pretty neat that people come together to help people in the time we're living in," Wenz said. "We're living in a hard time. People don't want to help people. They only want to get ahead."

Since the Wood County chapter began in 1991, it has built three houses in Bloomdale. The chapter is small but will move on to build two more homes in Cygnet.

The Habitat group is also looking for land in other cities, according to Maxine Miller, volunteer coordinator for the Wood County Habitat for Humanity Chapter.

Miller was instrumental in starting the chapter as a response to homelessness and the lack of affordable housing for some in the county.

She said nearly 100 people serve as volunteers and expects those numbers to grow.

"If we had the houses, I know we'd have the manpower," she said.

Since land costs are expensive in Bowling Green, the chapter won't be able to build within the city limits.

"We couldn't even touch BG. We might have to pay $14,000 just for the lot," Miller said.

The complete cost of building a Habitat home in the county is limited to $40,000. This includes land, materials and any expense involved in building the home, according to Wilfred Roudebush, campus chapter adviser for Habitat.

The Bloomdale homes were appraised at $32,000 and $38,000, respectively, but the cost of building them was only $20,000 each, Miller said.

Volunteer support is one way the costs are kept down.

For more information about Habitat, Miller can be reached at 352-6700.

HABITAT

"Someone from the international Habitat for Humanity also met with us. We came up with three functions of the campus chapter of Habitat."

One of the functions for both the Wood County group and the University chapter is fundraising. This is the biggest function because it is the most time-consuming, Roudebush said.

One of the primary ways of raising money for the organization is the annual Box City, which will be held in April for the third straight year. Last April, about 200 students participated in this activity and about $1,000 was raised.

The second purpose is construction, or the actual building of the homes. Each house takes about two years to complete, and Habitat usually only works on one house at a time.

The last purpose of the group is education, which includes speakers and educating the public about the need for more affordable housing.

Jim Young, a senior construction management major, helped make Habitat an officially funded organization at the University.

"It's been most challenging getting people that say they want to help out and then don't show up or do things," Young said.

There are 160 people who are now involved with campus Habitat for Humanity. Anyone interested in joining the organization may contact Jim Young at 373-0064.

THE HISTORY OF THE STUDENT UNION

UNION

The presence of the bookstore drew students to the Union, he said.

Several factors led to the gradual decrease of the Union's use as a gathering place.

Anderson Arena and the Student Recreation Center are two reasons for the decreased popularity of the union as a gathering place in recent years, according to Crooks.

Student meal plans were restricted to evening hours, which eliminated some of the daytime traffic through the union, he said.

With this year's addition of the Falcon's Nest eatery to University Dining Services, business has nearly doubled, Crooks said.

"The union has become much more of a central hub," Crooks said.

Structural changes accompanied the altered trends in the union's use.

The relocation of the bookstore and additions of the Bowl-N-Greenery and The Little Shop were the first structural changes to the union, although other conversions were made, he said.

The space where the computer lab is located was occupied by a night club called the "carnation room" until the early 1980s.

Crooks said this explains the mirrors at both ends of the room and the wooden floor in the center section that served as a dance floor.

"Students could go order food and be entertained by live entertainment," Crooks said.

The Pizza Outlet was once a game room where students could play cards and board games.

A student lounge with music equipment allowed students to listen to records, and it was located on the second floor until it was transformed into the Interior Design Lab.

Crooks said the lounge was a quiet listening room away from all the traffic in the building.

A small room connected to the billiards area of Campus Bowling and Billiards housed a barber shop, according to Crooks.

Another change brought Student Legal Services to the union. The space it occupies on the third floor was the Historical Suite, which was made up of several meeting rooms, Crooks said.

The fourth-floor hotel was refurbished in 1984-1985. According to Crooks, 12 years later, the furnishings are dated.

Much has changed, but some has stayed the same in the 50-plus year history of the Student Union. Above, students drink coffee while going over notes in a 1973 photo of the current Falcon's Nest eatery in the front of the Union. At right, bowling was one of the most popular past-times in the 1960s.

Most recently, the Falcon's Nest eating area was renovated. The south wall was extended 10 feet toward the Information Desk and the ceiling was redone, according to Crooks. Food service and cashier counters were added as well.

The University is hoping for an affirmative vote from the Board of Trustees Thursday in order to completely renovate the Student Union, truly making it — once again — a student-centered union.

The Falcon's Nest — a log cabin that served as the original "student union" on the University campus — is shown in 1957 while being moved down South Main in Bowling Green. The Nest was moved to the village of Portage, which is two miles south of BG on Route 25.

Students gathered there to play cards, dance and eat. Some even lived there.

If a residence hall comes to mind, guess again. All of this was found at the original University Union.

The Falcon's Nest was a log cabin built in 1942 to serve the University community as a gathering place, according to Stu Givens, University historian.

Bruce Bellard, 1947 University graduate, said the Falcon's Nest included an open room about one-third as big as the current Falcon's Nest, a kitchen, jukebox and a few back rooms.

He said students who worked at the Nest lived upstairs.

Dining halls were not built at the time; therefore, most students ate at the cafeteria and snack bar in the Falcon's Nest, Bellard said.

"It was very, very heavily used," he said. "There is no question about that."

Bellard said he and many other students helped build the log cabin through the National Youth Administration.

The students began the construction, but the job was finished by a contractor due to time constraints, according to Bellard.

The Nest was moved to Portage in 1957 to serve as the American Legion Hall, according to Dave Crooks, Union director.

The former Falcon's Nest can be rented out for parties, according to Charles Coddling, facilities services assistant director.

"It looks the same as it did when it was on campus," Coddling said.

Pancake breakfasts are held on the first Sunday of each month at the hall as well.

Falcons return favor, rout Spartans

□ BG avenges last year's defeat with a resounding victory.

By JASON McMAHON
The BG News

The painful memory of an embarrassing loss has no expiration date.

The Bowling Green women's basketball team emphatically proved that Saturday night with a 91-73 victory at Anderson Arena over defending Big Ten tri-champion Michigan State.

The Spartans had routed the Falcons 80-52 last year in East Lansing, Mich. en route to a Big Ten title and an NCAA Tournament appearance.

"We got spanked last year," said senior guard Sara Puthoff, who led all scorers with 25 points. "We wanted to come back, because that loss was still hurting for us. This is a tremendous win for us."

Puthoff led four Falcons in double figures as BG (5-1) reached its highest point output since putting 101 on the board Feb. 15 against Eastern Michigan. Senior forward Charlotta Jones scored 19, while junior center Jacki Raterman chipped in 17. Junior point guard Jenifer Gafford added a career-high 12 points off the bench (see related story).

BG's high scorer in last year's debacle was Michelle Terry with nine points.

"It started a year ago when they beat us so bad," said BG coach Jaci Clark. "That was a lot of our focus throughout the whole week. I don't think that we represented ourselves very well there last year and we really wanted to make sure we played as well as possible here tonight."

BG used an 8-0 run to break open a 9-all tie early in the first half, extending the lead to as many as 10 points before MSU (3-3) mounted a comeback, pulling to within one at 31-30.

But a 9-0 Falcon spurt — keyed by one of Puthoff's five 3-pointers — pushed the lead back to 10, and BG carried a 44-35 advantage into halftime.

The Falcons scored the first six points of the second half, and the Spartans would get no closer than 13 the rest of the way.

"For whatever reason, we came out flat," said MSU coach Karen Langeland. "We talked about increasing our intensity level in the second half and instead we came out worse."

"There's no excuse for us to give up 91 points to any team. I think our defense was pretty pathetic."

The Spartan defense allowed BG to shoot a white-hot 61 percent from the field, including a scalding 69 percent in the second half. Despite bemoaning her defense, Langeland was quick to give praise to the Falcons.

Puthoff

"Bowling Green played a heck of a basketball game," she said. "They played very well at both ends of the court. I think you have to give them a lot of credit."

BG had some problems putting the Spartans away, however. When MSU clawed to within 13 at 56-43, the Falcons were in the midst of turning the ball over three times in four possessions.

But the Spartans didn't take advantage, and Puthoff took control by draining three jumpers — including two 3-pointers — and diving for a loose ball and swatting it to Jones, who drove the lane to give BG a 21-point edge.

"People have to play big at big moments of the game, and you don't know when that's going to happen," Clark said. "Sara made a great defense-hustle play and finishes up with a three. I just thought she was real deadly tonight."

But Clark was quick to call the victory a team effort.

"I have to give a lot of credit to all our players. Charlotta and Sara played big," Clark said. "They played big, as big as they need to play, but I'm so happy with everybody."

"Everything was on all cylinders tonight."

The Falcons dominated the boards, grabbing 36 rebounds to MSU's 25. BG also dished out 20 assists, as opposed to 13 for the Spartans.

"They took it to us in every facet of the game," Langeland said.

■ The Falcons received valuable contributions from the bench, most notably from junior point guard Jenifer Gafford and senior guard/forward Bridget Andrews. Story, page seven.

Bowl matchups set; OSU in Sugar

The Associated Press

Unable to match the top two teams in the nation, the Orange Bowl on Sunday went for the next best game — No. 2 Nebraska vs. No. 3 Tennessee and Heisman Trophy hopeful Peyton Manning.

With No. 1 Michigan playing No. 8 Washington State in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1, the Orange Bowl could turn into a national title game only if the Cougars (10-1) upset the Wolverines (11-0).

The Orange is this year's top bowl alliance game and went for the highest-ranked teams available.

The Sugar Bowl will match No. 4 Florida State (10-1) against No. 9 Ohio State (10-2), while the Fiesta went for No. 10 Kansas State (10-1) vs. No. 14 Syracuse (9-3).

"It was a very close decision," said Keith Tribble, the Orange Bowl's executive director. "We had an undefeated and No. 2 Nebraska and we needed to get the No. 3 team and that was Tennessee."

But just barely. The Volunteers (11-1) got four touchdown passes from Manning to edge Auburn in 30-29 in the SEC title game on Saturday night. The result allowed the Vols to retain the No. 3 ranking over the Seminoles.

"It was an outside chance we had anyway," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said of getting into the Orange Bowl. "But we're just happy to be playing Ohio State in the Sugar Bowl. It should be a great game."

Automatic bowl alliance bids go to the ACC, Big East, Big 12 and SEC champions, with two at-large bids available.

The conference title winners were Florida State (ACC), Syracuse (Big East), Nebraska (Big 12) and Tennessee (SEC). Ohio State, second in the Big Ten, and Kansas State of the Big 12 were the at-large picks, with No. 5 UCLA and No. 7 North Carolina left out of the alliance.

"There will always be a little controversy, but I'm not sure that controversy shouldn't be a part of this game," said Roy Kramer, the bowl alliance coordinator and SEC commissioner. "That's what makes it great. We'll have a little bit of that, but

Moss, Marshall roll over Rockets

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Randy Moss focused on the game at hand, not on being handed a Heisman Trophy.

Moss caught three touchdown passes Friday night as Marshall rolled over Toledo 34-14 for the Mid-American Conference championship and its first bowl bid since 1948.

Moss was formally invited Friday to attend next Saturday's Heisman Trophy presentation at the Downtown Athletic Club. Michigan's Charles Woodson, Tennessee's Peyton Manning and Washington State's Ryan Leaf were also invited.

most years we've always ended up a consensus No. 1 vs. No. 2 and we've seen that in the last two or three years and I think we'll have that in the future."

Next season, the Rose Bowl and Big Ten and Pac-10 conferences become part of the alliance. If that was the case this season, a true national title game would have matched No. 1 Michigan against No. 2 Nebraska (12-0).

But for the second straight year, the top two teams will play games 3,000 miles apart.

Last year, Ohio State beat Arizona State 20-17 in the Rose Bowl and spoiled the Sun Devils' national title hopes. The result also turned the Jan. 2 Sugar Bowl into a true title game when Florida, ranked third at the time, beat a No. 1 Florida State 52-20 for its first national championship.

This time, it's the No. 1 team that has to lose in the Rose Bowl to give Nebraska or Tennessee a title shot.

Huskers coach Tom Osborne, whose team is 59-3 the past five seasons with national titles in 1994 and 1995, knows all about the twists and turns of winning a championship.

Timm looks to have locked up the starting goaltender's position with the shutout, but he also got plenty of help from the defense.

"Tonight, obviously a lot of guys back on defense did a good job," Powers said. "Our penalty killing was good. The goaltenders made the difference in the game."

The strong defense may have helped Timm relax. He seemed very calm as the third period ticked down.

"I felt real confident out there," Timm said. "The team was playing great in front of me, so I wasn't nervous at all."

Michigan State's freshman goalie Joe Block got the start over Chad Alban and did not disappoint. Blackburn stopped 26 of 27 shots in the hard-luck loss.

BG's penalty kill gets a lot of the credit as well. It shut down the Spartans in all five of their opportunities including a crucial pair late in the second period.

Bowling Green came up just short Saturday in a game that was not finished until a last minute empty-net goal by Michigan State's Mike York.

York started the scoring with a breakaway goal at 1:38 of the first period. MSU defenseman Tyler Harlton sprung him on a long pass from deep within the Spartan zone.

In the second period, Brad Holzinger scored on another breakaway to tie the game at one.

Holzinger's goal was only his second of the season, as the BG captain has been in a prolonged goal scoring slump.

A flurry of goals came at about the 15 minute mark of the second period.

The Spartans' Shawn Horcoff fired a slapshot on the power play that beat Timm's high glove side.

Less than a minute later, Dan Price scored his 4th of the year on an Adam Edinger pass from behind the net.

MSU's Sean Patchell made a great move on a BG defender, walked down the slot and scored the game-winner at 16:05.

BG made a valiant effort to tie the game in the third, but couldn't get it past Alban, who stopped 19 shots, eight of which were in the second period.

BG men take second at Pizza Hut Classic

□ The absence of Stacey is felt as BG falls in the tournament title game.

By SCOTT BROWN
The BG News

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Bowling Green's men's basketball team may be better off for not playing several games with Anthony Stacey early this season.

Conventional wisdom suggests that, with the junior swingman sidelined with a foot injury, other Falcons are gaining valuable experience trying to fill the hole he has left.

BG took second place this weekend in the Pizza Hut Classic on the campus of Southwest Missouri State. The Falcons defeated Maine 89-83 in Friday's first round but fell to host SMSU in the championship, 86-71.

The Falcons stand 2-4 on the season, with Stacey (14.3 ppg last year) having yet to play a full game.

Falcon coach Dan Dakich isn't convinced that not having Stacey now makes BG a better team down the road.

"With any team, you're not only building the players but you are building the play," Dakich said. "You're building a sense of playing with each other, how to play with each other, where each other's going to be ... and we're not able to have that with him out."

"He's giving a lot of guys the opportunity of playing time, but the best basketball teams I've been around have been about chemistry."

Dakich

Not having Stacey hurt the Falcons Saturday, as the Bears — with a lineup immensely bigger than the Falcons — eventually wore BG out inside. Four SMSU players hit double figures as the Bears controlled a lead as large as 28 points in the second half.

The Falcons played with the Bears early, leading 26-24 with eight minutes to go in the first half. The Bears then finished the half on a 20-6 run, including 14 in a row at one point against a BG team with only nine players dressed.

"On offense, I thought we had some patience (early on) and we made them work," Dakich said. "After the first 10 minutes, we got away from that and just

Reserves play big part in rout

□ The BG bench plays key role in win over defending Big Ten tri-champs.

By G. MICHAEL GRAHAM
The BG News

The Bowling Green women's basketball team pulled off a huge 91-73 win over Michigan State Saturday -- and they couldn't have done it without help from the bench.

Throughout the contest, players came off the bench and did little things to help the Falcons pull off the upset over the defending Big Ten tri-champs.

In the team effort, BG's Bridget Andrews and Jenifer Gafford played key roles coming off the bench. The duo led BG with five and four assists, respectively. Gafford also recorded a career-high 12 points.

Having people step up in key situations is something the coaching staff has preached since the Central Florida tournament a week ago. In this game, the three big scorers -- Sara Puthoff, Charlotta Jones and Jacki Raterman -- definitely received the necessary help to pull off the upset.

"Jenifer and Bridget had good games at Central Florida but struggled one game in there," said BG coach Jaci Clark. "They worked to get themselves out of that in practice. That's the big difference."

Gafford stepped up to the task of ball-handling after starting point guard Jaymee Wappes picked up two quick fouls to start the game. She had just two turnovers despite going against tight pressure applied by Michigan

Gafford

Andrews

State.

"Jaymee and I have been switched back and forth all season," Gafford said. "Jaci's been talking about getting some bench scoring and I just stepped up and did what I was supposed to do."

Throughout the game, Gafford's quickness helped break the press. She did an effective job of dribbling and seeing the floor at the same time while trying to get the ball over halfcourt. She credits BG strength and conditioning coach Stewart Briggs for helping developing quick feet.

"He had a good conditioning program at the beginning of the season," Gafford said. "My feet were big factors because I could just get right by them. If you got by them, you were fine."

Andrews came out and did what was asked of her. She said MSU was switching on defense so she looked for the open player while the Spartan defenders were switching. The senior had a team-best five of BG's 20 assists.

Andrews also thrilled the 797 people in attendance by making a fast-break runaway layup while getting fouled in the process.

"I took off early and Sherry (Kahle) just fired the ball," Andrews said. "It kind of stuck out to my hand. I went up, prayed and it went in the hole."

started shooting.

"This isn't a veteran crew. They'll play how you want them to play for a while, and then they'll revert back to what they are used to -- seeing open shots and shooting it."

The game featured Dakich against Steve Alford, the former Indiana star that first played with and then played for Dakich while the BG head man was a player and coach with the Hoosiers.

"This was a good tournament for us," Alford said. "We were able to get two lopsided wins. I thought we controlled (BG) after the first 10 minutes."

Kevin Ault drained six of the 11 3-point attempts he had Saturday on the way to 24 points and tournament MVP honors for the Bears. Dave Esterkamp and DeMar Moore each had 16 points to lead the Falcons.

Esterkamp was the star of Friday's game against Maine, blistering the nets for a career-high 28 points as the Falcons outlasted a hot-shooting Blue Bear team.

Maine had two players on fire -- Marcus Wills and Fred Meeks with 31 and 30, respectively -- but the Falcons were able to come up with the key shots down the stretch to secure the victory.

Tied at 81, BG freshman Dubrey Black calmly drained a 3-pointer with 54.6 seconds left to put the Falcons up to stay. Black, playing well alongside fellow freshman Jay Keys, had a personal-best 13 points in the win.

Keys, who was 4-for-4 from the floor, started for the first time for BG. Kirk Cowan -- probably the Falcons' most consistent player through the first weeks of the season -- also had a career high of 19 points for BG against Maine.

"It just showed our mental toughness," Esterkamp said. "We're getting there. We're taking steps."

BG plays in 1-2 regular season tournaments per year, but has not won one since 1978.

The Falcons host Wright State Wednesday.

We want to adopt a baby.
Four years ago we were blessed with the adoption of a beautiful baby boy. Today we hope to be just as fortunate by locating a birth mother who finds us to be the right family for her baby.
My husband and I are both artists and own our own design business. We work at home which allows us lots of time to be together. Our son Tucker very much wants to be a big brother and asked if he could adopt the baby too. To
